

To obtain a coating material with which high temperature resistant sealing elements can be made, particularly in the form of coatings on metal surfaces, it is proposed that the coating material should comprise a film-forming binding agent, a solvent for it and a high temperature resistant solid lubricant.